Faithful Touch Foundation

Hope in every touch.

One warm meal. One person who shows up.

How one shared meal, and a son's wish to honor his father, grew into a foundation that feeds children, keeps them in school and shows up for families in Kenya and Dallas.

WHERE IT COMES FROM

Raised to give. Founded to honor.

Daniel Mwangi grew up in Kenya, raised by his mom and dad in a home full of love, where helping others was simply a way of life.

His father and mother were always the first to reach out: a plate of food for a neighbor, a helping hand for a family going through a hard season, a seat at the table for anyone who needed one. They raised their children in love and taught them to always help people, and that example quietly became Daniel's own. When you are able to help, you help.

That example followed him into adulthood. As an entrepreneur, Daniel has walked alongside people in his community as they started businesses and found their footing. And because he has always loved food and the joy of cooking for others, he found one of the most natural ways to care for people: preparing meals and sharing them with neighbors living on the streets of Dallas.

In 2021, Daniel lost his father, John Mwangi. In the middle of that loss, he searched for a way to keep his father's memory alive, and found it in the thing his father loved most: helping people. That same year, Faithful Touch Foundation was born.

> "My dad loved helping people. Every meal we share and every child we reach is a way of keeping his memory alive."

In loving memory

Faithful Touch Foundation was founded in 2021 in memory of Daniel's father, John Mwangi, whose generosity and love for people live on in everything we do.

A father himself

Today Daniel is a proud dad of two boys, and he is raising them the way he was raised: to always offer a helping hand.

HOW IT ALL BEGAN

It all started with one shared meal.

Several years ago, on a holiday trip home to Kenya, Daniel noticed a young boy on the street who looked hungry and malnourished. He offered him a meal.

The boy returned with another boy from the street, one he called his brother. The three of them sat down together and shared a meal.

Then came a moment Daniel has never forgotten. Halfway through his plate, the boy stopped eating and set the rest aside to take to someone else. A hungry child with almost nothing was still making sure someone else would eat.

As they finished eating, Daniel asked the boys a simple question: would they like to go to school? They said yes. Before his trip ended, he had found a school, taken both boys into his care and enrolled them himself.

One of those boys stayed the course. Today he is in college, studying to become a chef and building a career in hospitality, doing what he loves.

> "It's amazing how one shared meal turned into all of this. Sitting at that table with those boys, I had no idea where it would lead."

WHY NOW

For years, this work was carried by Daniel himself, with generous help from friends, online well-wishers and partners like Binti Pads, founded by his friend Lorna. But the need has always been bigger than the resources. There is always another child to feed and another family to reach.

Now we are building something that lasts. We are inviting our community and supporters around the world to join us, so that together we can show up consistently, every single month, and one day, every single day.

ON THE GROUND

Real work. Real people.

Faithful Touch Foundation isn't a plan on paper. Our team has already been in Kenyan communities, sharing meals, playing games with children and organizing a girls' dignity outreach that brought sanitary pads and support to girls and their families. Binti Pads joined us as our outreach partner and supplied the pads.

Some of the children we met along the way we have taken into our care and put through school. One is now in college training to be a chef. Their progress is the reason we keep going, and the reason we want to reach many more.

Our outreach is documented on film so supporters can see the work for themselves. Episode 1, The Gathering, and Episode 2, The Community Day, from our girls' dignity outreach with Binti Pads, are on our website.

DECEMBER 2026 · KENYA

A Faithful Touch Christmas

December is the school holiday in Kenya, and children in children's homes are home all day. For many, Christmas passes without a special meal or a gift.

This Christmas, our team is visiting children's homes in Kenya to cook with the children, share a Christmas meal and spend the day together, so every child has a happy holiday memory. We also get to know each home, so we can keep supporting them all year long.

After Kenya, we bring the same table home to Dallas for neighbors experiencing homelessness, and then wherever a community needs a table.

$15,000

Our Christmas goal. Your support covers meals, cooking supplies, small gifts and transport for every children's home we visit. Supporters receive photos and updates after every visit.

Christmas meals

Rice, chicken, beans, vegetables and chapati for every child.

Cooking supplies

Fuel, pots, plates and cups so we can cook together on site.

Gifts and treats

Small gifts so every child has something to unwrap.

Transport

Getting our team and food between children's homes.

WHERE WE'RE GOING

Taking this to the next level.

So many people need help. Our goal is simple: help as many as we can, and help them in a way that lasts. That means growing from outreach days into year-round programs that empower children, women and people with disabilities.

Empowering children

Year-round meals and school support for the children's homes we visit, and sponsorships that keep orphans in class through secondary school.

Empowering women

Skills training, mentorship and small-business support so women can earn, provide for their families and lead, building on the business mentoring Daniel has always done.

Including people with disabilities

Meals, mobility and learning support, and a place at the table for children and adults with disabilities, who are too often left out of community programs.

Strengthening communities

Clean water through boreholes, regular community meals in Dallas, and partnerships that let us serve wherever a community needs a table.
